

BLOOD MOUNTAIN

SURVIVAL GUIDE

LOCATION 1: FIELDS / GRAVE YARDS

Looming danger: According to local lore, a Shapeshifter lurks. With its "Hollow eyes" and "Dry pale legs", it haunts the indigenous Hulder Folk and Fairy population with its ominous howling.

LOCATION 2: THE CAVE

Travel Tip: Found deep within the gauntlet of stone walls, a Crystal Skull awaits you. This divine object is essential for your future endeavor. Some call it "The source of consciousness."

BEWARE: Blood Sucking Flies.

LOCATION 3: SUMMIT OF MOUNTAIN FLAMES

Caution: Volcanic vents erupt without warning. Steady footwork is essential. Make your way atop the High Rock, there the pristine view will allow for a glimpse at the trail that lies ahead.

LOCATION 4: THE RIVER

Travel Tip: Refresh your energy at this point. Make proper use of the river's bounty but beware its violent surge.

Think I felt the end of time
Skulls aglow as crystal shines
And starts to warm the empty climb.

LOCATION 5: THE GORGE

In this valley of suicidal slopes a race of one-eyed beasts were shunned. The Cysquatch have a reputation of being highly territorial. A camouflaged trip through the valley is highly recommended.

LOCATION 6: THE BIRCH FOREST

Here you will find a colony of Birchmen as well as a sparse population of Ogres and Dwarves. When hunger ensues, find nourishment in the brains of local sheep.

LOCATION 7: SKY BOUND TRAIL

Dangerous Wildlife: Beware the ferocious "Hunters of the Sky". The beast's anatomy consists of a large shark-like abdomen, leather wings and hollow petrified bones. The best escape route is a feverish dash from one refuge to another.

LOCATION 8: FOREST OF ANCIENT ELM

Use the vines to propel yourself from tree to tree for swift passage through this region. Ground travel is made nearly impossible with the dense cover of gnarled tree roots.

Native Flora: The Poison Rose- Notorious for its hallucinogenic properties. The bark of the Elm Trees can be ingested and should be collected for meals in the forthcoming ice fields.

LOCATION 9: THE SUMMIT

(a.k.a. - The Siberian Divide)
Earthquakes are common and are said to originate from an angry Ice God. Snowdrifts exceeding six feet in height are recurrent. Extreme weather may inflict frostbite, and severe hypothermia. In this brutal climate The Crystal Skull may provide your only salvation.
